CONCLUSION

We are confident that we can achieve our conservative financial projections, generating a gross revenue in excess of (enter projected revenues for year 1) in year one after the opening of the business. In addition, our management has carefully considered its market, potential customer base, and its ability to grow its sales average to capture market share (in our area of business and abroad/in our area of business). With our projected numbers and the total market share and revenue in the (enter company industry) industry, we confidently project over a (estimate the entity value in year 4) entity value in year four. We firmly believe that our business has the potential to become a highly regarded resource in local and regional markets. Due to the company's aggressive marketing strategy as well as the careful development of company products and services, the establishment of the company as a regarded entity in our industry is now within grasp.
